A gift for my teacher's wedding

Ever since I knew how to draw realistic figures, I always loved to draw people close to me and give it to them as a gift.

This one specifically was a wedding gift for my teacher; she was one of the teacher that was very close to me, so I want to give her a gift that holds more emotional value rather than economical value.

Drawing Competition

I always look for art competitions to make my art more valuable. One of them was a art monthly competition. I found this competition only 2 days before its submission, but the prize it offered was plenty, so I was applying anyway. Later that day, I noticed that teher's some news that this competition was fake! I was shocked to hear that, but decide to submit it anyway, since it is my hardwork. Until now, I don't really know whether the competition was real or not, but this competition teaches me that I was able to finish this in under 2 days under pressure.

Creating my own story

As COVID was under its way, I was submerged in comic/manhwa. However, I never found something I liked, so my solution was, why don't I make one myself? Even right now in 2025, I am making a new novel, for future project
